To whom it may concern

It is my deepest pleasure to share my experience with Dr. Martine Ceberio, professor at UTEP and my research advisor.

I am pursuing MS in Computer Science and I am doing my research under her. I have known her since 2009. I have taken a class "Logical Foundation" in my first semester at UTEP with her. I was always interested in applied mathematics based subjects and the class was exactly what I was looking for. I have learned a lot in that class and the projects were really challenging and interesting. Besides the lecture was really understandable and she had a smooth way to explain the complex logics with simple and interesting examples and it made the subject more appealing to me. All these factors motivated me greatly to focus my research in this direction. So I choose constraint-based software verification as my master's thesis. As an advisor she is an excellent guide and she has vast knowledge and expertise in her field of research. Also she is very much friendly in nature and definitely co-operative. I always feel very much welcomed at her office and even though I am an introvert kind of person, I can discuss my ideas freely with her and I always get satisfied with an appropriate answer. Without her guidance I would not have been this much near to my research goal and I am very happy that she is helping me to reach that point.

Also her calm and deep personality is very much admirable. Overall, she is a very nice and respectable person.

Sincerely,

Shubhra Datta
